Environmentalist Sonam Wangchuk visits Government College Nalagarh on his 'Save Himalaya, Save Ladakh' march

PAWAN KUMAR

Nalagarh, 25 September 2024: Renowned environmentalist and innovator Sonam Wangchuk visited Government College Nalagarh while on his way to Delhi as part of his ongoing 'Save Himalaya, Save Ladakh' march. Wangchuk, accompanied by a group of around 150 environmental activists, is headed to the national capital to raise awareness about climate change and the urgent need for environmental conservation in the Himalayan region.He was accorded a warm welcome by the college staff and students, including Principal Dr. Sapna Sanjay Pandit, at the event held at Government College Nalagarh. The Principal, in her welcome address, lauded Wangchuk's tireless efforts.In conjunction with Wangchuk's visit, the NSS (National Service Scheme) unit of the college also organised a special cleanliness drive today itself. The drive aims to spread awareness about waste management and promote clean surroundings as part of a larger effort to combat environmental degradation. The students right now in the form of enthusiastically participated in the activity, cleaning the campus and surrounding areas, thus demonstrating their commitment to Wangchuk's message of responsible environmental management.Addressing the gathering after the drive, Wangchuk educated the students on the importance of responsible consumerism, and emphasised how daily choices can either contribute to or mitigate environmental degradation. "If we want to protect our fragile ecosystem, we have to adopt sustainable lifestyles and avoid unnecessary consumption," he urged. He described climate change as a "ticking time bomb" that, if left unchecked, will cause irreparable damage. "The changes we are witnessing melting glaciers, extreme weather events and drying rivers are just the beginning. If we do not act now, the situation will spiral out of our control," Wangchuk warned.The 'Save Himalaya, Save Ladakh' march is not just a protest but also a call for unity in protecting the environment. At the conclusion of the event, Dr Sapna Sanjay Pandit thanked Wangchuk for inspiring the students and staff, and emphasised the importance of such initiatives in shaping a greener and more sustainable future. The visit left a lasting impact on the college community, with many students expressing their commitment to adopting more environmentally conscious habits.
